

James M. Mattimoe

partner

Jim's practice focuses on the federal income taxation of corporations, partnerships, limited liability companies and individuals, including rendering advice regarding the formation, operation, merger, division, sale and liquidation of entities; structuring transactions and negotiating and drafting the documentation necessary to accomplish them; advising on the tax consequences of proposed actions; and performing compliance work and administrative practice before local, state and federal taxing authorities. Jim has extensive experience in drafting and interpreting partnership allocation and distribution provisions, and he has been involved in the restructuring of several organizations that involved chains of interlocking partnerships and corporations.

Jim is a frequent presenter on tax considerations in choosing a business entity to a variety of audiences.
