

Michael J. Underwood

partner

Mike represents employers in all major areas of labor and employment law. His practice includes defending employers in discrimination and wrongful discharge litigation. Mike also represents employers in collective bargaining and arbitration cases. He advises on OSHA, COBRA compliance and affirmative action. In addition to his clients in the private sector, Mike represents several municipal government employers for labor negotiations, public-sector union representation matters, and civil service law issues.

In addition to his employment law work, Mike handles public accommodation claims under the Americans with Disabilities Act, including cases concerning website accessibility. He presents training sessions for human resources professionals and managers designed to give practical, effective approaches to minimize legal risk and improve employee relations. He also serves as a frequent presenter on various employment law topics for seminar and industry/management groups and is a regular contributor to employment law blogs and publications.

Mike was a contributing editor to "How Arbitration Works," Elkouri & Elkouri Supplemental Update, and to "The Developing Labor Law," BNA Books, Cumulative Supplement.
